The disclosure relates to an operating member operable to be operated by an operator for opening and closing an opening of a fuel tank provided in an automobile or the like. There is known a fuel tank opening-and-closing apparatus for an automobile or the like in which a slider is slidably provided on a shaft of a link member rotatably attached to a vehicle body, and the slider is engageable with a latch member fixed on the vehicle body to open and close the opening of the fuel tank (refer to patent document 1). A pressing member is abutted to the slider to open and close a groove of the slider and the groove is formed to be detachable from the pressing member as required. Patent Document 1: Japanese Patent No. 32123031. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a process for producing chlorine from hydrocarbon materials such as methane, natural gas and petroleum by the use of a catalytic material comprising copper, silver and magnesium with chlorine being simultaneously produced as a by-product. More particularly, the present invention is concerned with a process for producing chlorine from hydrocarbon materials such as methane, natural gas and petroleum and to a catalyst suitable for the same, which comprises comprising copper, silver and magnesium and is capable of producing chlorine in a high yield by subjecting the hydrocarbon materials to a thermal decomposition process in the presence of hydrogen under conditions where the above-mentioned components are in contact with each other while at the same time such hydrogen is fed to the contact reaction zone. 2. Description of the Prior Art A process for producing chlorine from hydrocarbon materials such as methane and petroleum is known, which comprises, for example, subjecting the hydrocarbon material to a thermal decomposition process in the presence of hydrogen to produce a thermal decomposition product, reacting the thermal decomposition product with hydrogen in the presence of a catalyst comprising copper, silver and magnesium to produce metallic copper, silver and magnesium, separating the metallic copper, silver and magnesium from the reaction mixture 1cdb36666d
